

MOTOR SPEECH DISORDERS

A Cross-Language Perspective

Edited by Nick Miller (University of Newcastle) and Anja Lowit (Strathclyde University)

Review

This is a ground-breaking seminal work which assesses the state of knowledge in a wide variety of languages, lays the theoretical foundations for future research and is a much needed complement to research in aphasia. It greatly enriches our understanding of the representation and organization of speech and language in the human brain.

Jack Ryalls, University of Central Florida, USA

Description

This book investigates cross-language aspects of motor speech disorders, including their assessment and treatment as well as the underlying neurophysiological and neuropsychological disruptions that bring about disorders of speech motor control.
